The right picture of success

By John C Maxwell · Comments (22)

Last week, I shared some of the wrong definitions of success that so many of us believe in. I shared my belief that they're either wrong, or at best, incomplete. I believe success is ultimately a journey.

So how do you get started on the success journey? What does it take to be a success?

The picture of success isn't the same for any two people, because we're all created differently – as unique individuals. But the process is the same for everyone. It's based on principles that do not change. After many years of knowing successful people and studying the subject, I have developed the following definition of success:

1. Knowing my purpose in life

2. Growing to my maximum potential

3. Sowing seeds that benefit others

“When those closest to me love me the most.”

I look for someone to come and help me...

No one will help me...

Then I pray to, O Lord,

I say, “You are my place of refuge.

You are all I really want in life.”
